The Eleventh International Conference on Emerging Security Information, Systems and Technologies

<http://www.iaria.org/conferences2017/SECURWARE17.html>

Digital transformation is changing our society in ways that were never imagined some years ago. Disruptive technological innovations such as large-scale cloud infrastructures, novel 5G communications networks and smart IoT (Internet of Things) devices are widely being adopted on areas as diverse as automotive driving, remote surgery, smart cities and open-data governments. This increasing the digital fingerprint of our services also raises Cyber Security risks that our society needs to face.

This track will focus on identifying state of art operating systems and applications cyber security. The objective of the track is to target researchers interested in all aspects of the operating systems and application techniques to ensure high security and privacy of information. We are also interested in applications and case studies of different practical cyber security domains. This track will be of interest to researchers and leading edge practitioners in academia, industry, and government agencies concerned with computer and network security. We will also welcome short papers describing open issues of theoretical or practical problems still not addressed in the security field.

Topics include, but not limited to:

- Operating systems security
- Web application security
- Server application security
- Mobile security
- Distributed systems security
- Applied cryptography
- Cloud Security
- IoT Security
