MEDIA 2019, The Eleventh International Conference on Advances in Multimedia

<https://www.aria.org/conferences2019/MMEDIA19.html>

March 24, 2019 to March 28, 2019 - Valencia, Spain

Currently, there is a large amount of data produced by various sectors of modern society that causes data deluge. They include physical real-world data, social media data, and open data. Such data are collectively called social big data. If different kinds of data in multimedia are analyzed in a mutually related fashion or any kind of data are spatially and temporally analyzed, values which cannot be acquired otherwise will be discovered and utilized in various applications ranging from tourism, disaster management, emergent automobile services to human and space science.

The topics of interest include, but are not limited to:

- Concepts and frameworks
- Social data mining
- Scientific data mining
- Open data mining
- Geosocial computing
- Human-centered computing
- Spatio-temporal mining
- Artificial intelligence, machine learning, and data mining
- Data management
- E-Tourism

- Disaster management
- Internet of Things
- Mobility as a Service
- Space exploration
- Services and applications
- Software quality assurance
